Die Happy: A Mystery in Three Acts B. S. Peterson

Die Happy is a mystery in three acts play about a well to do, somewhat shady business man who has gone missing. His family, friends, and business associates are summoned to his lavish home on the weekend of Halloween in hopes of shedding some light on his whereabouts. Strangely, the body of a dead man washes up in the local bay, setting the stage for a series of shady characters, dirty deeds, secrets, dead bodies, back stabbing, secret passage ways, double crosses, lies, extortion, and plot twists galore. Tension continues to mount during a Halloween party when the characters are forced to dress in various costumes and join in on the masquerade. To make matters worse (or better) there are two endings! The director has the option of choosing to end the play in one of two ways. Either way is fun, fun, fun! The action takes place in a one room set with a cast of six men and three women plus extra non speaking parts. Rated PG-13 for "salty" language.
